

What is the "net emissions increase" for a project?

The "net emissions increase" for a project that may be subject to PSD permitting at an existing major source has two components:

- The emissions increase from the project itself.
- The sum of the emissions increases and decreases of all projects implemented over the last five years that were not otherwise considered in a PSD permit action.

The net emissions increase is, in the strictest sense, the sum of these two components.