

Yes, this is actually a stream. Beneath the logging slash is a non-fish-bearing headwater stream with water flowing year round.

Chris Clinton performing a substrate assessment at one of the western Washington fish-bearing ERST sites.

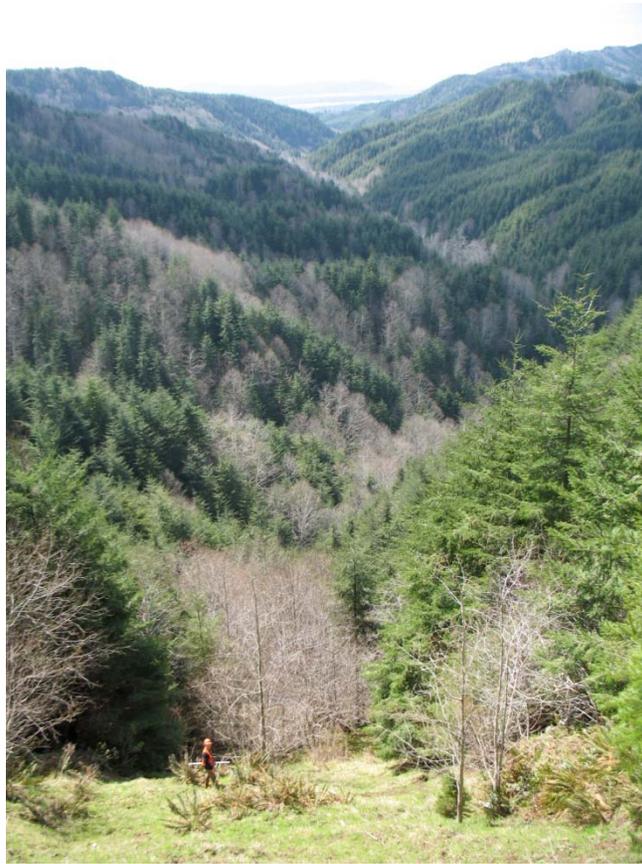

Kevin Kennedy measuring out the stream reach length at the Puyallup River, one of ERST's western Washington fish-bearing sites.

A view overlooking the mouth of the Columbia River around Cathlamet, WA.

A shot of a western Washington fish-bearing ERST site.

Kevin Kennedy stops to pose before our steep hike down into one of our sites in southwest Washington.

A shot of one of the ERST fish-bearing sites northeast of Mt. Vernon in Skagit County.