Good morning Nate. Following are some comments on the Japanese eelgrass.

I would like to add my voice to the opposition of herbicidal spraying in Willapa Bay. Burrowing shrimp will be adversely affected by spraying and they are an important species for sediments and forage. The Japanese eelgrass provides almost the same function for many species as does the native, and this area is part of the pacific flyway and should be protected from spraying. Please deny an NPDES permit.

thanks
