Subject: Please don't lower the water quality standards!
Date: Monday, March 23, 2015 4:04:21 PM

Dear Department of Ecology,

Please reconsider the proposed change to water quality standards. Fish have been an important and sacred food source for people in Washington since long before it was a state, and we should be doing everything we can to make it safer to eat fish, rather than more dangerous. Fish also attract tourism and promote business in Washington, and having large runs of healthy fish can help our state move forward economically. Fish are also healthy, when they're not full of toxins, and can save the state money in healthcare and associated costs. Please think of the long-term health of our state and don't allow industry to poison our fish, one of our most unique and wonderful natural resources.

Best,

Tommy Miller
